In parallel to the 5th international Degrowth academic conference, the "Budapest Degrowth Week" will feature practical workshops, panel and participatory discussions, and also concerts, artistic performances and interactive tours throughout the city.

Whether you are already involved in alternative projects or just curious about the solutions that are being debated and experienced, join the Degrowth Week open festival!

From a Degrowth perspective, art is still a way to resist: an open door for thoughts and utopia. Heard as a tool to decolonize imaginary, art will be highly promoted during the Degrowth week and many events will take place all around the city. The Latarka gallery will host an exhibition in the frame of the Degrowth Week.

For detailed information and descriptions of the events, take a look at our website: http://budapest.degrowth.org

What is Degrowth?

Degrowth has emerged over the last 10 years. This "provocative slogan" has been used to inspire in-depth debates on whether infinite growth in a finite world is desirable or even possible. The main goal of the Budapest Degrowth conference and week is on one hand to question the limits to growth in understanding the challenges faced by society and on the other hand to implement dialogue about solutions on different levels.
